tary of the interior has decided not to revoke Mr. Vilas' order consolidating the four land districts in eastern Kansas. This order, which was one of the last made by the retiring secretary, consolidated the four land districts of Independence, Wichita, Concordia and Topeka. The one large district is to be known as the Topeka district, and the land office at Topeka was to transact the entire business. As soon as the republican administration came into power an effort was made to have the order revoked, but before action could be taken the transfer of records and books had begun and the consolidation had been practically effected. Secretary Noble was urged to restore the four districts as they existed, notwithstanding, but after a careful investigation he had decided it impracticable. The land offices at Independence, Wichita and Concordia have therefore been discontinued and Registers Clate M. Ralston Joseph E. McCoy and Samuel Deemers and Receivers Henri W. Young, Robert F. Coates and Archibald A Carnahan are out of office, John L. Price, register, and Charles Spaulding, receiver, at the Topeka office, will conduct business for the new district until their successors are appointed. This makes the Topeka land office one of the most important and remunerative in the state, and there will doubtless be numerous candidates for which was one of the last made by the retirant and remunerative in the state, and there will doubtless be numerous candidates for register and receiver. Price's term expires April 14, 1890, and Spaulding's July 21, 1889. The latter official will probably be allowed to finish his term.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 26.-Attorney General Miller, in conversation with a delegation, outlined what will be the policy about changes in the judicial offices, the district attorneys and United States marshals. He said that where republicans had been turned out by the last administration before the expiration of their terms, he was inclined to favor the removal of the democratic incumbents, but where the attorneys and marshals were allowed to serve out their terms he thought their democratic successors should be treated with equal fairness, provided they had shown themselves competent. He then explained that by serving out their terms, he did not mean that democratic marshals and attorneys should serve until their commissiona expired, but that they should have four years in office. In many cases attorneys and marshals were appointed during the recess, and were not confirmed until months afterward. Their commissions were dated with their confirmations. He proposed that these should give place to the republicans when their four years of service were up, and not hold on until their commission ran out. When incompetency could be shown, the attorney general said, removals would be made regardless of terms. trict attorneys and United States marshals.

The "Wizzard" Came Back. NEW YORK, March 25.-The Times says: Jay Gould is in New York. The trip begun with a flourish and mapped out for "A rest for two months" has been compressed into two weeks. There was to have been a month at New Orleans, at Bay of St. Louis and other resorts on the gulf. All these pleasing engagements are abolished. The "Wizzard" came scurrying back to Wall street and there is a reason for all this that is likely to appear in something like sensational shape very soon.
